

Occupational Health Medical Surveillance Exam Process: The process through which an Occupational Health (OH) Nurse initiates a preplacement/baseline, job-transfer, post deployment, or retirement/termination medical surveillance exam for a Federal technician through the Federal Occupational Health Program (FOH-NET)

Description

The Occupational Health Medical Surveillance Exam Process details the necessary actions required for the initiation, scheduling, and completion of a medical surveillance exam for Federal technicians. The medical surveillance exam is a necessary step in the pre-employment, job-transfer, post-deployment, and retirement/termination screening of identified Federal technicians.

After receiving notification from the Human Resources Office (HRO) regarding the technicians requiring medical exams, the OH nurse initiates the medical exam scheduling process through the Federal Occupational Health Program (FOH-NET). With assistance from the FOH-NET representative, the exam is scheduled and completed with a FOH (Federal Occupational Health) provider. The medical exam results are evaluated by a FOH certified OH physician who also provides a recommendation as to whether the technician is medically qualified to hold the desired position. The OH nurse reviews these results and submits the recommendation to the HRO to complete the processing.
